

Friday

Dorrie

Hope you don't mind me christening your pad. I didn't have time to write you last night. Cully and I went to see "Col. Blimp" and didn't come out until 9.35. which meant that I had to wait for the 10.30 train home.

Grand film - beautifully acted and subtle colouring. - I thoroughly enjoyed it. Have you been to see any films lately, honey, you don't mention how you are amusing yourself these days. Been dancing at all?

Any news from the draft front? I know you hadn't moved on Wednesday, cost you letter to Cully was postmarked that day. Yes, you rat, you might have written to me at the same time! I had made up my mind not to expect letters for a few days in view of the pending move. - So imagine my joy when I found a familiar blue envelope on my table yesterday. Cor!

And then it wasn't for me at all!

like putting a dinner in front of a hungry dog then taking it away after he's sniffed it.

have mind, Cully let me read it, so I had second best.

By the way did the bike go OK after you'd messed about with it, & did you get your ride up the hill?

loving you,
Clod.

undated letter with no envelope. Assumed to be between the 13th and 25th February 1943.