

The Office.
Tuesday

Darling mine,

It was the most heavenly weekend ever. laughing together at Abbott & Costello, nice walks around the Park, and then the hour spent in the Crook Log, lazy afternoon and evening at nuni's. Really it was all so peaceful & happy that we almost imagined that the war was over.

As for you, honey, you're still the most wonderful man a girl could ever wish to meet, and to actually marry you was her wildest dream come true.

Did you find yourself in

The midst of a flurry and bustle on Monday when you returned, everyone getting ready for the trials? I hope everything goes off O.K. tomorrow and that you stay put so that we may have another two days of heaven this week by the sea.

I have been up to my eyes in work, but am enjoying myself hugely. Mussa appreciates that I more or less know what I am doing and leaves me to get on with it, which is what I like.

Last evening there was a pile of laundry for me to iron & by the time I had finished it I was too tired for anything else so I just packed off to bed early. Crashed down, as they say in HUND.C.F.

Today I lunched with Culby & Guy and another Arts Club girl called Nina. We had a most delicious dish of rice, flavoured and mixed up with liver, chicken & tomato, followed by ~~the~~ gateau & coffee. Good grub and surprising cheap. The Café Bleu, know it herey?

The conversation was very gay with dancing - but honestly darling they live in another world. It all seems to be froth & bubble which makes me wonder whether they ever come down to earth at all. At any rate they eat!! and heartily!!

Most refreshing experience for me, rather the effect of a glass of wine.

Gave me a sparkle + lifted me for a short while from my sober life.

Won't it be wonderful darling when the war is over and we can pick up the threads together, and have gay times
and visit places + laugh with friends
of our own type and generation?

It'll be one long string of seven days' + weekend leaves but without the goodbye at the end.

how I must fly
heed I add that I love you angel.
