Sunday

Dearest,

I'm writing this on the same jettie that you saw on your last visit, so if you imagine a lighter breeze, sunshine & a fair amount of peace & quiet you'd get an idea of the surroundings of the atmosphere. The duty marks come about because I'm on duty & haven't washed yet - but'll come later - much - later.

I suppose you want to know of any developments in the commission line - huh? Well, I haven't much to report - the inst. Officer saw my Skipper & he tells me that the Officer had one or two "suggestions" to make What they were I wasn't told I'm waiting for something to happen for better or for worse

- it's debatable what I consider to be better or worse.

I'm afraid, my darling, that altd the opportunity to have you next week will probably be there, the where-with all to do same will not be there. Things is pretty tight with your old man which same can be said about the whole Ship's company thus ruling out any chance for rubber.
What a grim situation!

I suppose that they now
the picture are hung up?
I bet they look good. ~~As~~ I told you over the phone

It may be that I shall be able to get a little bit of leave - a day or two - & then I'll be up the line quicker than that to bounce busily in the arms of my baby glancing the while at "neck + neck" & thinking what a very appropriate title it is too.

I didn't play on Saturday which was just as well because my training these last few months has fitted me more for the gentle pursuits rather than rugged:

I wrote a letter to the Daily Express yesterday!!! After reading an essay by James Agate - whom I detest -

I felt an uncontrollable urge to tell somebody that Agate's egotism (or egoism?) - was getting me down & what about it. I don't suppose anybody'll take any notice of it - least of all Mr. Agate - but it is ~~the~~ the ~~first~~ first because it's the first letter I've ever written to any paper. I think I'll continue on those lines - rather fun.

Bye for now, lovely lady.
Hubley.
