Sunday.

Hija Darling,

I went ashore today. It was like stepping out of clinic after a ten year stretch. Only for 3 hours in the afternoon but it certainly was heavenly. I don't know yet what they're going to do to me but I think they'll decide in a day or two.

I went aboard 764 & saw the Skipper, etc. Capt. wants to retain my services, having a temporary W.M. whilst I'm away, but I'm not so sure that I shall be sea-worthy, as it were. If they do finally decide that conditions aboard have helped to bring on this then I shan't go to sea again

- on an U.T.B. anyway.

I'm afraid that time has rather marched on more than somewhat since the last part. & I shall have to neglect you tonight, sweet.
But tomorrow I write plenty, if there's plenty to write about, & there should be considering

I love you
