

The Office.
Wednesday.

Dearest

What! I hear you say.
Two letters from my wife in one week. Something must be up.

Well I thought you'd like to hear right away the news that an exceedingly proud father has just conveyed to me.

Its a Boy. - weighing 8¹/₄ lbs.
Some nipper according to Jim,
though he hasn't seen it yet.
He had the news by phone
this mornig - just the bare details.
Vera it seems did not have nearly so long in the theatre this time. Jim was talking to her last evening on the phone &

baby arrived around midnight.

I've written a letter to Vee, congratulating them both on doing the job properly, and you have her address in case you care to do like wise.

I bet she can hardly wait now to get back her strength & gather all her family around her once more!

I told her that you were leaving for 7 days in the near future & trusted she'd be home so's you can dangle Roger upon your knee. Remember how young Sue christened your best suit?

Pat has just time to say

That flux is coming on 10 days leave tomorrow. I do hope you can manage to coincide for a change
daring.

It seems that he has been on a battle course at Norfolk for the past few weeks - sleeping out & roughing it in all that snow.
Phew! He's a better man than I am. G.D.

Pat says that she is wondering if this leave will turn out to be embarkation leave, & we shall probably have to consider one another.
Two grass widows will be.
Boo hoo!

Pat has a young brother of 18 who only joined the Navy last summer. He has just had 14 days & gone overseas. So really we can count ourselves fortunate. (?) (?)

By the bye, if you get the chance to see 'Laura' don't miss it.
The action, characters & photography are excellent. One of those psychological detective stories - really well done. I give it full marks.

Seem to have loads to talk about, darling, but I'd like to catch the post with this.

If you know the words of 'Only Forever', you know how I feel about you, darling.

Bless you,

Clare

6 pm. Lit. Whataday.

P/mx. 500221.

mess 18.

4ms DORNET.

POST

parts

